South Korean business owners call for boycott of Japanese goods

Boycott of Japanese products in front of the Japanese embassy in Seoul, South Korea, Monday, July 15, 2019. (Associated Press Photo)

SEOUL — Dozens of South Korean small-business owners rallied in South Korea's capital on Monday calling for boycotts of Japanese consumer goods to protest Tokyo's move to tighten high-tech exports to its neighbor.

Kim Sung-min, president of the Korea Mart Association, urged shop owners to boycott the distribution of Japanese products until Tokyo apologizes over the trade curbs and withdraws them. Other demonstrators held up signs that read, "Our supermarket does not sell Japanese products."

South Korea is concerned that the strengthened Japanese export controls of photoresists and other sensitive materials that are mainly used for manufacturing semiconductors and display screens could potentially hurt its export-dependent economy.

Japan's measure, which went into effect earlier this month, has stoked public anger in South Korea, where many believe Japan still hasn't fully acknowledged responsibility for atrocities committed during its colonial occupation of Korea from 1910 to 1945.

Thousands of South Koreans have signed petitions posted by citizens on the presidential office's websites that called for boycotts of Japanese products and travel to Japan and for South Korea to skip next year's Tokyo Summer Olympics. Retailers have also reported modest drops in the sales of Japanese beer.

"We will continue boycotting the consumption and distribution of Japanese products until Japan's government and the Abe administration apologizes and withdraws its economic retaliation," Kim said, referring to Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe.

Tokyo says the materials affected by the export controls can be sent only to trustworthy trading partners. Without presenting specific examples, Tokyo has questioned Seoul's credibility in controlling the exports of arms and dual-use items that can be used both for civilian and military purposes.

South Korea says its export controls are working just fine and that Japan is retaliating against South Korean court rulings that ordered Japanese companies to compensate aging South Korean victims for forced labor during World War II.

South Korea plans to file a complaint with the World Trade Organization and will raise the issue at next week's WTO General Council in Geneva, the country's trade ministry said Sunday.

Last week, South Korea's presidential office proposed an investigation by the United Nations Security Council or another international body to look into the export controls of both South Korea and Tokyo as it continues to reject Japanese claims that the South could not be trusted to faithfully implement sanctions against North Korea.

Critical Analysis: George Washington's Farewell Address

By: Park Rye Won

To enlighten the idea of freedom to the people, George Washington had spoken about how people should seek out liberty for their nation, future, and themselves individually. He argues that the unity of the nation should be formed before anything else. He strongly builds his points by using ethos, anaphora, and pathos in his farewell speech.

Primarily, the majority of the persuasive device Washington used in his speech is ethos since he wanted to establish his credibility all throughout his speech, not only to bid farewell but also to prove his authority as the president of the United States for two regimes. In his first line, he quoted, "the period for a new election of a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time actually arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is to be clothed with that important trust." From the beginning of his speech, Washington commences to edify his gratefulness and emphasize the retirement he has decided a long time ago. He established his authority by saying that he is thankful to the people of the United States for giving him the chance to serve them twice. Likewise, he wanted to emphasize the importance of his position as the head of the state and as the forefront who lead the people, he stresses the importance of vigilance to watch the state. Hence, he intensifies his speech by giving anaphora or repetition of phrases through this line, "Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor or caprice?" He highlights the absurdity of entangling and favoring other nation; for in Washington's eyes jeopardizing nation is like having conflict or war with another as to the status quo that has happened in the European nation. He asks rhetoric to reinforce his point that their country to preserve its sanctity of peace needs to be neutral to any country in the world. In his provocative finale, he uses pathos by persuading people in this line, "Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?" He implores the people to continue to fight for the freedom of the nation despite vices and difficulties. That the people in all its power should only fortify what is in the constitution to practice justice and cultivate benevolence; watch with good faith and morality. Furthermore, he even rouses his audience by quoting, "since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government." He encourages the people to be aware of their freedom and that murderous foreign policy could harness the liberty that they so desired. The burgeoning argument of Washington proved that the United States people should constantly crave for the liberty and freedom that they have longed for ages. He cautioned the people by using the ethical appeal, pathetic approach, and anaphora to strengthen the mind and be wary of the vital support of the nation against conflict as he adjourns the office of the presidency.

The athlete I look up to...

by: Jeon Min Jun

Do you have your own idol? Mine is a soccer player named Son Heung Min. As of this year, he is one of the best soccer players in Asia. Most professional teams want him to play for them. Soccer is my passion and Heung Min inspires me to play better.

At the age of 16, Son Heung Min dropped out of high school and focused on his dreams to become a professional soccer player. In one pre-season game in 2010, he led his team to score 9 goals. The agencies were so impressed that they have him sign a contract at the age of 18. I first saw him while I was at home watching a soccer game. He made a goal so perfectly. Soon, he became my most favorite soccer player. Most people might think he is not a good role model for a kid like me. But, I think it is okay. Soccer is a sport that he really loves. Instead of not doing anything, he focused on developing skills, improving himself and playing hard to get his dream. He never gave up and always does his best in every game. I remember watching a game between Korea and Germany. A teammate passed the ball but it was too high. It almost went to the end of the field but he sprinted across the field and scored the winning goal. Even when he got into a slump and his shooting chances were low, he kept trying and trying. He always gives his all. He trains harder than any other soccer player and takes every chance he has on the field to get out of his slump. His talent and perseverance are what makes him the best soccer player and my all-time favorite.

Today, he has become the most important striker and midfielder. Now, he has a large amount of transfer fee. He became the most important soccer player in Korea and Tottenham, East London. At a ripe age of 27, he still has a lot to accomplish. I still want to see him grow as a player and as a person. Someday, I want to be a successful player like him. If I learned something from him, it's to never give up.

Why Learning Many Academic Courses is Beneficial

by: Lee Ye Geon

In modern days, many people just focus on one course for them to concentrate or to master the subject easily. Yet, some people still manage to learn or master a lot of courses. I agree that learning many academic courses is more beneficial. I will give three reasons to support my idea.

To begin with, it is useful. For instance, there was a genius who was an expert in IT. He consistently showed lots of amazing performances. He figured out all the problems of the computer. Nevertheless, since, he put all his time learning about IT, he was not able to learn how to speak English. Therefore, the man was fired, because he was not able to communicate or tell the boss what the problem of the computer was.

In addition to that, it is less stressful. For this reason, a man was forced to study Science by his parents. The man hated his parents, because of the strict behavior that his parents showed to him. Even though it was boring, he learned about it all day. He had to talk and listen to only Science. When the man became a doctor, he killed his parents through surgery. He intentionally killed them. To relate this, a person could be stressed when he only does the same thing. A person should learn a variety of subjects for him to feel less tired.

Last but not least, it is non-rebellious. For example, there was a movie where all the people in the family had to be doctors. The child would be disowned by their parents if he didn't become a doctor. There were members of the family who disagreed, for the parents really loved their child and respected his own decisions. The children wanted to learn many subjects like other interesting ones. At last, it ended into a feud between the families. To relate the story, if someone wants to explore all kinds of subjects, his decision or preference should be respected and not forced.

Kids: Stressed

by: Jeon Tae Ryn

Kids, you know what? You don't have to do your homework. My mom gives a lot of math homework. But they should not give homework for she knows I have a lot already. Here are some reasons why kids should have less homework.

First, there isn't enough time in the day to do everything. Why? Let's think about this situation; what if we didn't have enough time to do everything? This might lead to copying and cheating. You might think it's impossible, but desperate times sometimes call for desperate measures.

Second, kids don't have time to rest because of their homework. So it means they can't sleep if they don't finish it. Also, they can't play after school. Kids will be all burnt out before they could have time to do the things they want. Sometimes they even lose interest making it hard to manage our time.

However, an article written by Anne Marie Helmenstine, Ph.D., entitled: Why Homework is good and sometimes bad, said that homework gives us excellent effect as well. Homework helps us work independently since we try to look for solutions and information on our own beyond the scope of the class. But, if we are having a tough time with it, this could be a way to spend time with your parents by asking for their assistance. I know I mentioned that we might lose time when we have too much homework, but it teaches us time management and how to prioritize tasks. This gives us time to reevaluate ourselves to look for self-improvement.

The main thing to remember is to find balance. Homework allows us to get better grades, but too much of it will cause stress that can be harmful. Give time to rest or play to keep our mind off of things that will upset ourselves.

If I had three wishes...

by: Song Joon Ha

When times are difficult, people think to themselves: "If I had 3 wishes I would...". I am usually among these people because sometimes my school and life can be hard. If I had three wishes, I would like to have one hundred thousand million more wishes! But if I can only make three here is what it's going to be...

For my first wish, I would like houses for my family. It would be better if it was in a quiet place. I don't want to live in a hectic area. Of course, it should be very large; I want to live comfortably. Also, all my tools should be of the highest quality. I don't like something that breaks easily.

Next thing that I would wish for is to have all the money in the world. Nowadays, I am interested in shopping. However, I don't have enough money to buy the things I want. But, If I had all the money in the world, I would be able to buy everything. Not only that, but I could also do other things like traveling all over the world. And then one day, When I finally got everything, there would no longer be items in the world. But this is just my imagination, so let's not think about it without writing it!

The last thing that I would wish for is to have superpowers. This also doesn't make sense, and it's only possible in movies. However, If I have superpowers nothing will be impossible. I would be able to use my abilities to help others just like the superheroes in the movies I love. Sharing my abilities to make a better world would be the best.

Surely, all of the things I'm saying is impossible, but we can all dream. If there is such a thing as magic, then we should be responsible enough to share what we have to the rest of the world. Not all of our wishes can come true but we can all do our best to achieve our dreams.

Sealions: Lovely and Fatal

By: Cho Ye Jun

How would you visualize a sealion? Many people think sea lions are cute and lovely; they are immobile and peaceful creatures. People call them the cats living in the sea. However, they are dangerous, lethal, strange and in peril.

Why? Because they can hunt 30 hours in the ocean and dive 400 meters down the ocean according to a TedEd speech. They have a very good memory that they can remember tasks even if they don't do it in 10 years. On the other hand, despite the sea lion's amazing skills, their numbers are decreasing. They are dying. Why? Because of climate change! How? The warm climate makes toxic algae grow fast in the ocean. Fish eats these algae without dying but when sea lions eat these fish, the algae from the fish damage the brains of sea lions which kills them in no time.

What are we going to do to save the sea lions? Can we blow up the sun so there's no global warming? Can we kill all the algae in the ocean? Can we just pray to God? Of course not! How can we reduce climate change? It is simple to plant trees. But it is not that simple because trees grow after hundreds of years. So we have to act now.

My Own Adinkra Symbols

By: Lee Yoon Seo

Adinkra is a kind of cloth from Ghana. It's made by the Ashanti people. At one time, only the royalty wore it. It's made of silk and it feels smooth. Adinkra cloth is embroidered in sections and hand-printed all over in black ink.

If I were to make my own Adinkra symbols, they would be ribbons, butterflies, and triangles. The first symbol would be a ribbon. It means beauty and kindness. When a girl wears a ribbon, it makes her pretty. So, I choose it for beauty. Its softness can mean kindness.

A butterfly represents sweetness and 'to fly high'. Butterflies feed on nectars of flowers. This is why it represents sweetness. Butterflies can fly high which for me stands for motivation or, in other words, achieving your dreams.

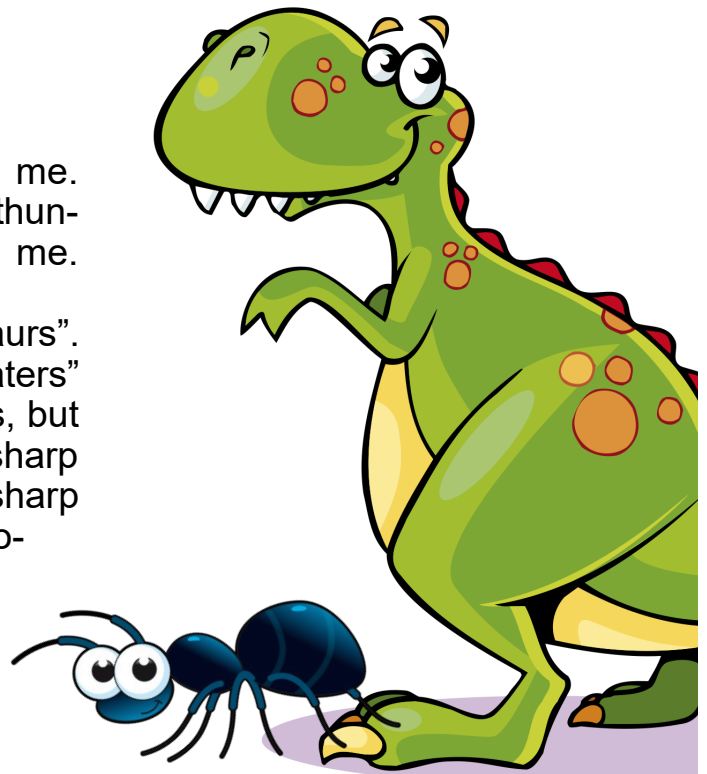

The last symbol is about work. I choose the triangle symbol for it is a difficult shape.

An Ant and the Dinosaurs

By: Kang Si Hyun

Hi! I am an ant! I live with creatures larger than me. When they come closer to me, they sound like thunder. I am afraid that large things could step on me.

One day, I saw them! They were called "dinosaurs". There were two kinds of dinosaurs — "meat-eaters" and "plant-eaters". Meat eaters looked dangerous, but plant-eaters looked kind. Meat eaters had very sharp teeth, while plant eaters had rounded ones. The sharp teeth of the dinosaurs made them eat other dinosaurs. The rounded teeth of some dinosaurs enabled them to eat only leaves or ferns. I don't want to see dinosaurs anymore...

Life Cycle of the Butterfly

by: Kwak Byeong Heon

I am a caterpillar. I grow inside of my tiny yellow egg, which is about the size of a dot!

I am now two weeks old and my skin is splitting again! I have bright stripes on my body. I have 6 arms and 10 legs. MY horn is to scare my enemies away!

I am 4 weeks old! I am a full-grown caterpillar but now, I am going inside my pouch called chrysalis.

When I am 7 weeks old, I climb out of my pouch. I grow strong wings so I can fly. Now, I am a butterfly!

Kim Yuna

by: Kang Si Hyun

Kim Yuna was an ice skater. She was born on September 5, 1990. She has many Olympic medals. Kim Yuna's first Olympic medal was from the 2010 Olympics. It was a gold medal!

Nowadays, she helps poor people. She has a kind heart.

I think Kim Yuna is the world's greatest athlete. Her manners are graceful and cool. My family said, "She is cool." I will remember Kim Yuna, the ice-skating athlete forever.

LITTLE GRUNT & THE BIG EGG

By: Kang Si Hyun

Little Grunt had a dinosaur named "George". But, there were problems. George grew and grew and grew!

He was too big for their cave. Moreover, George ate all the leaves off all the trees and all the bushes all around the cave.

So, Little Grunt's family complained. Leader Rock said, "The big lizard must go." So, he went away. Little Grunt missed George so much. One day, the volcano nearby erupted! The rock was coming to the Grunts!

They were trapped! Then, there was a sound like "KUNG! KUNG!" and it was George! At last, George rescued Little Grunt and his family to a safe place.

Chitter chatter, chitter chatter
 Furry brown hamster
 It's small eats smaller than rabbit
 Small cute hamster run, run, run

Chitter chatter, chitter chatter

Is the hamster's steady patter
 Even when she's eating seeds
 Which she hopes will make her big

My Adventure Island

by: Kim Min Seong

The island looks like a potato that is pecked by a crow.

The smell is like a banana
I bought in Havana.

I hear a seagull that is very cool.

I feel tired in a deserted island
that is hotter than Iceland.

I feel excited Definitely not blighted because I can swim like an athlete exercising in a gym.

I feel alone
because I do not have a phone.

I cannot call an airplane to this atoll.

Then I see a banana tree that makes me hungry.

It tastes like a banana from Havana.

I hear a bang
that sounds like a mustang.

I am surprised like I want to throw a banana that is dried.

Then I see a bear
that is eating a pear.

I runaway to the bay.

When the night is approaching

I see a tortilla floating.

I have an idea
to use the tortilla.

I put it
like the size of a whit.

I see a seagull that looks like an eagle.

I catch the seagull and I latch on it.

The bird starts to fly
when I say bye.

I ride the bird
until I see a word.

I fly home
and use Google Chrome.
